NOVENA to the SACRED HEART

JUNE 3-12

As the United States of America commemorates the 250th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, our U.S. bishops, in a historic moment, will consecrate our country to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Bishop Fernandes invites the faithful in the Diocese of Columbus to participate in a novena to the Sacred Heart, which will begin on Wednesday, June 3rd, 2026. For the full schedule of Masses around the diocese, visit columbuscatholic.org/events.

O Most Sacred Heart of Jesus: You know the longings of our hearts, and you desire that we enjoy friendship with you. From your pierced side, you have poured out the wellspring of life, for which we thirst. Your heart burns with a love for all people to return to a right relationship with you. We celebrate the abundant gifts you have given this nation, founded on the self-evident truths that our Creator has endowed all people with the right to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. We make reparation for the offenses against you and against human dignity that have taken place in this nation. May our hearts be united to yours, so that our families and communities enjoy peace and happiness; may broken relationships be reconciled, injustices repaired, and the wounds of our land be healed. May your holy Catholic Church serve as a sign, pointing all people to your infinite love. O Desire of Nations and Center of History, we ask you to bless these United States of America. Who live and reign with God the Father in the unity of the Holy Spirit, God, for ever and ever.

Amen.

*Most Sacred Heart of Jesus, have mercy on us!
Immaculate Heart of Mary, pray for us!*

Making the Sacraments a Habit, not an Obligation

By Paul Stokell, Adult Formation Director

On a Sunday with the title Solemnity of the Most Holy Body and Blood of Our Lord Jesus Christ, it makes sense to think a bit on this “idea feast,” one that’s based on a concept and not a person or an event in Salvation History. Ordinary Time has quite a few “idea feasts,” when our Church wants us to, well, think about something!

We as Catholics don’t just drift into a life shaped by the Eucharist and the Sacraments. We grow into it through intentional, repeated, embodied practices that slowly, gradually redirect our desires. The difference between “fulfilling an obligation” and “living a sacramental life” isn’t just about motivation or emotion; it’s about formation. One of my favorite books is from James K. A. Smith, You Are What You Love (Brazos, 2016), who writes that human beings aren’t really “thinking things” at all, but “desiring creatures,” shaped by liturgies—both sacred and secular—that we choose to inhabit. If our habits are formed by the mall (a “secular cathedral”), the smartphone, social media or the calendar, then our loves will be shaped accordingly. If our habits are formed by the Mass, the Sacraments, and the rhythms of the Church’s year, then our loves will be drawn toward God. I heartily commend this book to your summer reading list!

Insights of habit theory, especially from another good book, James Clear’s Atomic Habits (Avery, 2018), are surprisingly like Catholic spirituality. Clear insists that “you do not rise to the level of your goals; you fall to the level of your systems.” Catholic tradition has always known this. The Church’s sacramental life is itself a system—a divinely instituted pattern of embodied practices—that slowly, imperceptibly, forms a believer into a disciple. The question, then, is how we can intentionally develop the habit of attending Mass and celebrating the Sacraments not as mere duties but as the natural expression of a life reordered toward God.

Clear’s first insight is that habits grow from identity. We don’t simply do things; we do them because of who we understand ourselves to be. He writes “the most effective way to change your habits is to focus not on what you want to achieve, but on who you wish to become.” For us, this identity is already given in Baptism: we are members of Christ’s Body, participants in His priestly, prophetic, and kingly mission. The shift from obligation to intentionality begins with reclaiming our identity.

A Catholic who sees Mass as a weekly requirement will approach it with near-minimal engagement. A Catholic who sees himself as a worshiper—one whose life is ordered toward the praise of God—will gravitate toward the Eucharistic celebration.

Smith’s anthropology reinforces this: our deepest identity is shaped by what we love, and what we love is shaped by the practices we inhabit. To see oneself as a Eucharistic person is to be already drawn toward the altar. A practical step here is to articulate this identity explicitly. Clear recommends small, identity-based statements: “I am the kind of person who...” For Catholics, this might become: “I am the kind of person who begins each week at the altar,” or “I am the kind of person who seeks Christ in the Sacraments.” These statements are not self-help slogans; they are reminders of baptismal truth.

Clear’s “four laws” of behavior change map surprisingly well onto the Church’s pastoral wisdom:

Make it obvious: Put reminders of the sacramental life in your physical environment. A Missal on the nightstand, a Crucifix near the door, a parish schedule (or this Bulletin!) on the refrigerator—not as superstitious tokens but environmental cues.

Smith emphasizes that secular liturgies shape us through the spaces we inhabit; the same is true of sacred cues that point us toward even momentary worship.

Make it attractive: This doesn’t mean Mass as entertainment. Rather, it means connecting the practice to our deepest desires. Clear notes that habits become attractive when they are associated with belonging. We can cultivate this by forming relationships within the parish: joining a ministry, attending a Life Group, or simply arriving early enough to see and greet others. Experiencing real human communion reinforces the desire for Sacramental Communion.

Make it easy: Clear insists that reducing friction is essential. This might mean choosing a consistent Mass time, preparing clothes the night before, or arranging transportation or childcare with others. The goal is not to trivialize worship but to remove those unnecessary obstacles that can make attendance feel burdensome.

Make it satisfying: The Church provides the deepest form of satisfaction: the grace of the Sacraments. Clear’s insight is that immediate, tangible reinforcement helps habits stick. Catholics might reflect briefly after Mass on one moment of grace, one line of Scripture, or one interior movement. This creates a positive feedback loop.

Smith argues that “liturgies”—those repeated, embodied practices—shape our loves more powerfully than ideas. To develop the habit of sacramental life, Catholics must embrace the physicality of worship. This includes arriving early to settle the body and mind, participating fully in gestures, responses, and singing, practicing silence before and after Mass to allow the heart to absorb grace. Preparing intentionally through prayer, Scripture, or daily examination of conscience also empowers these habits and redirects us when we stray. These practices can be the means by which the Holy Spirit forms desire. Over time, the body learns the rhythms of worship, and the heart follows.

Finally, both Clear and Smith acknowledge—implicitly or explicitly—that transformation is gradual. Clear writes that “habits are the compound interest of self-improvement.” Smith would say that liturgies slowly recalibrate desire. The Church would say, of course, that grace builds on nature. We who intentionally cultivate the habit of Mass and Sacraments will not always feel fervent. But over time, the repeated encounter with Christ in the Eucharist, Reconciliation, and the rhythms of the liturgical year will reshape our heart. What begins as intentional Catholic practice can, with God’s help, become spiritual instinct.
